

The Old World Village in Huntington Beach, Orange County CA, USA

If Orange County is your next place to visit, make sure to drop by this Old World Village in Huntington beach in Orange County, California. Here, you can find many traditional village homes, of 17th century German architecture with warm timber architectural details. The balcony is filled with trail of succulents, floating above the walking path, and adorned the scenery with a variety of foliage, form, and colour. The painted motifs around the windows and doors accentuate the charm of the old world. Check out these photos below.

Octoberfest is the annual celebration here in September, at the Old World Village. These cultural events incorporate German foods for tasting experience to all visitors, as long bratwurst, sauerkraut and beer are your favourite.

Plum Festival will be on August 21st here too, and Octoberfest will be on September, this year. Why not mark these fun days to your 2016 calendar, and get there for a fun family day outings.

By the way, you might know, that plum is a humble and amazing fruit packed with various nutritional benefits. Fresh, preserved, dried, and cooked plum, all are deliciously taste. Why not add this fruit to your diet for a healthy digestive system.

Wish to be there too...!
